important thing which we may call wisdom. The role of skill has become very much larger than it used to be. It must be admitted that wisdom in our world is useless except for those who realize the great part played by skills, for it is increase of skill that is the distinctive feature of your world. Although scientific skill is necessary, it is by no means sufficient skill without wisdom may prove destructive. For this reason it is of great importance that those who receive a scientific education should have understanding of that kind of wisdom which can be imported by cultural side of education. Science enables us to know the means to any chosen end, but it does not help us to decide upon what ends should be pursued. If you wish to save the human race it will show you how to do it. If you wish to secure adequate prosperity for the whole world or human race science will tell you what you what you must do.

But it will not give you that instinctive understanding of human beings that is necessary. It cannot teach you patience it cannot teach you sympathy. It cannot teach you sense of human dignity. These things, in so far, as they can be taught in formal education, are most likely to emerge from the learning (III) Shreya's voice is
